

Sujatha Jesudason, PhD, CoreAlign Director. From examining the fault lines in efforts to curtail sex selection to exposing attempts to pit reproductive rights against disability rights, Dr. Jesudason works to forge unlikely collaborations and look past forced simplifications. She brings her expertise in social justice organizing and advocacy to her role as Director of CoreAlign, a “think and do tank” that is creating a 30-year strategy to win resources, rights and respect for all people’s sexual and reproductive decisions. With over 20 years’ experience as a researcher, advocate and organizer for women’s lives, Dr. Jesudason has worked at Generations Ahead, Center for Genetics and Society, Asian Communities for Reproductive Justice, and 9to5 National Association of Working Women. She works at the intersection of issues too often considered separately: economic inequality, domestic violence, cultural norms, discrimination, gender roles and racial identity. In this, Dr. Jesudason merges not only topics but methods, from rigorous academic research to on-the-ground movement building, and from legislative education to media advocacy. A leading voice on the ethics of human genetics, women’s rights and racial justice, Dr. Jesudason holds a doctorate in sociology from the University of California, Berkeley and an undergraduate degree from the University of Wisconsin, Madison.
