

Sarah Raifman, Project Manager, Global Turnaway Study. Sarah Raifman is a Project Manager for ANSIRH's Global Turnaway Study. The study aims to understand the impact of being denied legal abortion services for women in Nepal, Tunisia, Colombia, South Africa, and Bangladesh. Prior to joining ANSIRH, she contributed to epidemiologic studies on the measurement of informal sector abortion in South Africa, completed a fellowship at UCSF focused on international family planning advocacy, and conducted evaluations of the LifeWrap, a device to prevent mortality and morbidity from postpartum hemorrhage. Ms. Raifman began her work in reproductive health at the Population Council, where she evaluated community-based reproductive health programs in Africa and Asia. She brings significant experience in quantitative and qualitative research and program implementation, and is dedicated to improving the health and wellbeing of vulnerable populations. She received her BA in Development Studies from Brown University and her MSc in Global Health and Population from the Harvard School of Public Health. 510-986-8974.